

DG-GT Theme Day

Leipzig, Germany

16 & 17 September 2019

Partner Information Pack

The DG-GT is a non-profit society dedicated to exchanging knowledge and accelerating the development of gene and cell therapies to benefit patients. The society brings together academics, clinicians and industry active in the gene and cell therapy. As the main DG-GT event of the year, the Annual Meeting attracts delegates from all over. Beside cutting-edge science, up-to-date programming, our meetings also have a strong focus on Early Career Researcher engagement, and enabling in-depth networking and collaborations across our exhibition and fully catered opening and closing receptions, coffee and lunch breaks and poster sessions.

We are expecting 200+ delegates at our 2019 Annual Meeting, which is dedicated to CAR-T cells – a current topic in the field. The meeting is organised by the DG-GT, led by Boris Fehse and a local organising committee, led by Ulrike Köhl. Invited speakers across the plenary and keynote sessions will represent leading institutions in the development of CAR-T therapies. Three inaugural lectures of newly recruited professors to the University of Leipzig and a reception will also be an integral part of the meeting.

The meeting will take place in the Fraunhofer Institute in central Leipzig. The Fraunhofer is a specialist research institute with a modern and comfortable lecture theatre and a combined space for the exhibition, posters and catering, well suited to the networking DG-GT delegates love about our meetings.

Although we attract new collaborators every year, 75% of our sponsor base work with us year on year across multiple events. We strive to balance academic excellence and open discourse with the opportunity for delegates from both industry and academia to network in a comfortable and casual setting.
